GAMBLING WAR IS RENEWED BY GOV. COOPER

Executive Calls on Attorney General To Stop Betting At Tracks In State.

Columbus, O., June 18—Gov. Myers Y. Cooper today renewed his efforts to stop gambling at Ohio race tracks.

The Governor sent the following letter to Attorney General Gilbert Bettman:

"The continuation of gambling at the dog races in West Jefferson (Madison county) and at the horse races at Bainbridge (Geauga county) gives me, as governor of Ohio, great concern. Will you please investigate conditions and adopt such means as, in your judgement, are legal and proper to put an end thereto?"

Upon receipt of the governor's letter, the attorney general put in a long-distance call for London, Madison-co, with a view to talking to Attorney Dean Richmond, prosecuting attorney of that county.

PLANS CONFERENCE

Bettman told newspaper men that he hoped to arange for a conference to be held here with Richmond this afternoon. The attorney general, also, contemplates arranging for a similar conference with Attorney Richard H. Bostwick, Charden, prosecuting attorney of Geauga-co.

Pointing out that he had just received the governor's communication, the attorney general said he had, as yet, formulated no plan of action.

Bettman stated, however, that he is "for law enforcement" and is "counting on success" in his contemplated efforts to cooperate with the local authorities in an endeavor to end gambling at the race tracks.

SILENT ON PROCEDURE

The attorney would not discuss what might happen in the event that the prosecuting attorneys or other local officials failed to take such action as either the governor or the attorney general might feel they should take in the matter.

Without making any specific references, Bettman stated that the convening of a special grand jury was not the only method of procedure that might legally be followed in stopping race track gambling.

CLEAN GRAIN BINS IS LEWIS' ADVICE

With wheat harvest near at hand, the wheat farmer who is planning to store part of his small grain can do well to take the percaution of thoroughly cleaning out all grain bins before thrashing, recommends County Agent H. S. Lewis. One of the chief enemies, grain weavel, lingers in trash, dust and crevices about storage bins. If these bins are thoroughly swept out and sprayed with formaldehyde and water half and half most of the insects will be routed or killed.

Carbon di-sulphide is the most satisfactory fumigant. It should be used in earthen vessels placed about the bin and at the rate of six pounds per 1000 cubic feet of space. The bin should be thoroughly cleaned out before spraying and fumigating.

HEAT RECORDS GO TUMBLING

Circleville Suffers With Eastern Portion of U. S. In Torrid Wave.

The Eastern half of the United States was on the Griddle today and heat records were popping like jackets on so many frankfurters. In Circleville the maximum temperature was 92 degrees and at noon today it was 89.

Somewhere in Alaska an Eskimo may be whistling "Button Up Your Overcoat" but from the Mississippi valley eastward thermometers were boiling over with no letup predicted by weather experts for several days.

However, beginning with Minnesota, Iowa, Nebraska, Kansas and Oklahoma and going westward, temperatures were dropping.

In the lake region of California several inches of snow still covered the ground with the mercury havering around 30.

Excessive heat slowed up the hustle and bustle of New Yorkers with the thermometers due to touch 92 degrees by 3 o'clock this afternoon.

The mark is four points higher than the maximum of yesterday and breaks a 46-year-old record with a new average of 32 degrees for any June 18.

While thunderstorms may temporarily afford relief tomorrow, no cooler weather is in sight for several days, the weather bureau says.

Some of the exhibitors go in for full trousers to the point where they look like old hoop-skirts.

Others show a preference for very tight breeches in bright colors.

Collars of all sizes and styles from those with merely three-inch points to drooping capelike neck-gear are displayed. Lacy shirts, sheer lingerie, and delicate, finished accessories such as gloves, hats, fur neck pieces and be-ribboned canes are threatened for the men of the world by some of the more venemous designers.

Pickaway livestock farmers have played an important roll in this phenomenal marketing program. The local association shipped 659 floors of livestock last year. The records for 1929 show a substantial increase over 1928.

Rocket Machine To Travel To Moon In Few Hours Invented—Wins Prize

PARIS, June 18—A new route for tourist agencies to book for —round trip to the moon.

It's possible now. At least, a new rocket machine has just been invented which the astronomical society of France finds practical.

This inter-planetary vehicle was planned by Professor Hermann Oberth, a German professor now teaching at a Roumanian university. For his invention, he has been awarded the Rep-Hirsch prize for astronautics by the French society.

The coach and four which will conduct passengers on this little jaunt is a rocket propelled by ejections of hydrogen gas at such a speed that it will outstrip the force of gravity.

The trip will be short—about three and a half hours—allowing the excursionists time to see a little of the neighborhood in which they land before they return to mother earth in the evening.

Trips to Venus, which will take longer, about two days, will be added to the itinerary when a few more scientific details have been worked out.

When the pasengers arrive on the moon, they will have the slight inconvenience of wearing oxygen gas masks, for the moon is destitute of our freest commodity—air.

The French society has awarded honorable mention to Noel Deisch, of Washington, D. C., who has invented a means of supplying oxygen to moon voyagers.

The invention of Professor Oberth is theoretical as yet. He has demonstrated that the means of propulsion by hydrogen can be employed. The rocket machine remains still to be constructed, so that the time when the new service will be inaugurated is indefinite.

SAW HUSBAND NEAR MIDNIGHT SHE DECLARES

COLUMBUS, June 18.—After being questioned for more than than three hours and one half, Mrs. Snook late this afternoon suffered a nervous collapse. Women attaches of the conference room rushed out and got a glass of water for her. Five minutes later a second glass of water was obtained for her.

Prosecutor Chester shortly before 3 o'clock left the conference room and informed newspapermen that Mrs. Snook denied having any connection with the murder but she deviated somewhat from her original statement, by admitting that she saw her husband in their home at 11:30 o'clock the night of the murder. She stated that she had gone to bed at 9:30 o'clock, was awakened by the slamming of the door when the rain storm came up and as she went down stairs, she saw her husband. This was at 11:30 o'clock.

JEALOUSY REPORTED

It was announced this afternoon that the second analysis of the stomach of the slain medical student would be made. Findings as a result after the first postmortem were not revealed.

That Dr. Snook and Marion T. Meyers, the other O. S. U. faculty member, who is being detained for investigation regarding the revolting slaying of the 25-year-old girl were jealous of each other in regard to Miss Hix was the substance of statements made today by William North, head of the police force on the Ohio State university campus.

A knife resembling the common house paring knife was also found near the spot where the girl's body was found. It is believed the knife will throw new light on the mystery, on where and how Miss Hix came to her death. The knife was discovered by Detective Larr Van Skaik on the New York Central rifle range where the murder occurred and is now in the hands of County Prosecutor Chester.

SPOTS ON KNIFE

The knife has a blade about four inches long with black wood handle. There was one or two spots on the blade. Police officials believe it was the one used to inflict some of the wounds on Miss Hix's body. Her throat had been cut and there were knife wounds on her shoulder and across her abdomen. Her head had been beaten in with a hammer.

According to North, he had

When they learned last year that they were sought on a warrant, the farmer and son moved away from Darbyville. Several weeks ago the sheriff's office learned that they were again selling corn to the Pickaway Grain Co and asked to be notified when they appeared again.

Tuesday morning Mister and Master Estep arrived with 10 bushels of corn and Deputy Porter was summoned. They will be held on the old charge until the ownership of the grain they brought Tuesday is established, county authorities said.

Rocket Machine To Travel To Moon In Few Hours Invented—Wins Prize

PARIS, June 18.—A new route for tourist agencies to book for —round trip to the moon.

It's possible now. At least, a new rocket machine has just been invented which the astronomical society of France finds practical.

This inter-planetary vehicle was planned by Professor Hermann Oberth, a German professor now teaching at a Roumanian university. For his invention, he has been awarded the Rep-Hirsch prize for astronautics by the French society.

The coach and four which will conduct passengers on this little jaunt is a rocket propelled by ejections of hydrogen gas at such a speed that it will outstrip the force of gravity.

The trip will be short—about three and a half hours—allowing the excursionists time to see a little of the neighborhood in which they land before they return to mother earth in the evening.

Trips to Venus, which will take longer, about two days, will be added to the itinerary when a few more scientific details have been worked out.

When the pasengers arrive on the moon, they will have the slight inconvenience of wearing oxygen gas masks, for the moon is destitute of our freest commodity—air.

The French society has awarded honorable mention to Noel Deisch, of Washington, D. C., who has invented a means of supplying oxygen to moon voyagers.

The invention of Professor Oberth is theoretical as yet. He has demonstrated that the means of propulsion by hydrogen can be employed. The rocket machine remains still to be constructed, so that the time when the new service will be inaugurated is indefinite.

PASTOR'S WIFE RECEIVES CALL

Mrs. McElfresh Succumbs Suddenly At Columbus Hospital.

News of the death of Mrs. Franklin McElfresh at Grant hospital at 10 o'clock Monday night came as a shock Tuesday to her many friends in Circleville. She has been in the hospital for eight weeks, and was to have been brought to her home here Tuesday, very much improved, and at the time of her death, Dr. McElfresh pastor of the Methodist church was in Delaware. In addition to her husband, Mrs. McElfresh is survived by one daughter, Miss Florence McElfresh, an interior decorator at Columbus. The sincere sympathy of not only the members of the congregation of the Methodist church, but of everyone in Circleville who knew them, is extended to Dr. McElfresh and his daughter.

The funeral arrangements have not beet completed but services will probably be held in the church on Thursday afternoon, with burial in McArthur.

SAW HUSBAND NEAR MIDNIGHT SHE DECLARES

COLUMBUS, June 18.—After being questioned for more than than three hours and one half, Mrs. Snook late this afternoon suffered a nervous collapse. Women attaches of the conference room rushed out and got a glass of water for her. Five minutes later a second glass of water was obtained for her.

Prosecutor Chester shortly before 3 o'clock left the conference room and informed newspapermen that Mrs. Snook denied having any connection with the murder but she deviated somewhat from her original statement, by admitting that she saw her husband in their home at 11:30 o'clock the night of the murder. She stated that she had gone to bed at 9:30 o'clock, was awakened by the slamming of the door when the rain storm came up and as she went down stairs, she saw her husband. This was at 11:30 o'clock.

JEALOUSY REPORTED

It was announced this afternoon that the second analysis of the stomach of the slain medical student would be made. Findings as a result after the first post-mortem were not revealed.

That Dr. Snook and Marion T. Meyers, the other O. S. U. faculty member, who is being detained for investigation regarding the revolting slaying of the 25-year-old girl were jealous of each other in regard to Miss Hix was the substance of statements made today by William North, head of the police force on the Ohio State university campus.

A knife resembling the common house paring knife was also found near the spot where the girl's body was found. It is believed the knife will throw new light on the mystery, on where and how Miss Hix came to her death. The knife was discovered by Detective Larr Van Skaik on the New York Central rifle range where the murder occurred and is now in the hands of County Prosecutor Chester.

SPOTS ON KNIFE

The knife has a blade about four inches long with black wood handle. There was one or two spots on the blade. Police officials believe it was the one used to inflict some of the wounds on Miss Hix's body. Her throat had been cut and there were knife wounds on her shoulder and across her abdomen. Her head had been beaten in with a hammer.

According to North, he had

SENTENCED AFTER PLEADING GUILTY

Herbert Ishmael, 23, and Arion Pierce, 20, both of whom admitted they were from Lexington, Ky., instead of Oklahoma as they claimed when arrested six weeks ago, pleaded guilty Monday to indictments charging them with burglary and larceny in connection with the robbery of the Clarence Robison filling station, S. Court-st, in which they obtained some candy, cigars and $1 in change.

They were sentenced by Judge J. W. Adkins to 1 to 15 years each in the Mansfield reformatory. The youths, who claimed they were tree surgeons, were represented by Attorneys I. F. Snyder, and Tom A. Renick. Their alleged companion in the robbery, John Williams, of Canada, has pleaded not guilty to a similar indictment.

FATHER AND SON HELD ON WARRANT

William Estep, 55, and his son, Elmer Estep, 20, of Pike Run, near Adelphi, were arrested Tuesday morning at the Pickaway Grain Co. elevator by Deputy Sheriff Carl Porter on an old warrant charging them with the theft of eight bushels of corn from I. S. Carpenter, of Darbyville, in June, 1928.

When they learned last year that they were sought on a warrant, the farmer and son moved away from Darbyville. Several weeks ago the sheriff's office learned that they were again selling corn to the Pickaway Grain Co. and asked to be notified when they appeared again.

Tuesday morning Mister and Master Estep arrived with 10 bushels of corn and Deputy Porter was summoned. They will be held on the old charge until the ownership of the grain they brought Tuesday is established, county authorities said.

EAGLES TEAM ANNEX LEAGUE SECOND PLACE

Local Nine Makes Advance When Mt. Air Outfit Is Defeated Sunday.

The Circleville Eagles ball club stepped out Sunday and let the highly touted Mt. Air club down on the short end of a 7 to 4 score. By winning from them the Birds went into a tie for second place in the Central Ohio league.

The new battery which the management recently signed showed up good in this game and fans will see some neat work on their part during the balance of the season.

The Mt. Air team was resting in second place prior to Sunday's game and was considered the best team in the league by many of the Columbus sport writers. Old Fred Bruck, who did the chucking for them, has long been considered the best pitcher in Central Ohio and any team that knocks him out of the box must have a powerful attack. That is just what the local club did Sunday and they also used his successor mighty rough.

The Eagles started scoring early in the game. They pushed a run across in each the first, second and third innings, while Boyd, the new pitcher, held the Mt. Air batters at his mercy until the third inning when they chalked up their first run. They then tied the score by scoring a run in the fourth and fifth innings. Then both pitchers pitched air tight ball until the last half of the seventh when the Mounts shoved across a run to take the lead.

But, Birkhead, the first man up in the ninth inning singled solidly to center. He was promptly sacrificed to second by E. Beatty. Then A. Beatty crashed a long double over the center fielder's head to plate the fleet footed Birkhead with the tieing run.

The Mounts failed to score in their half of the ninth off of the slants served them by the veteran Lee Downs who took up the pitching duties after Boyd had been removed in favor of a pinch hitter in the ninth inning.

HITS LONG TRIPLE

Bob Wolford led off in the tenth inning with a long triple which traveled far over the right fielder's head striking the butt of a big tree which stood on the bank of the river. The ball bounded back into the field and it was only the tree that saved the drive from going for a home run.

It was a terrific smash. At this point of the game the veteran Fred Bruck was removed from the box and Red Bayes, another star hurler, was sent in to try to still the Circleville bats. Harvey Miller, a Circleville boy, greeted the new pitcher with a grass cutting single that scored Wolford with what was in reality enough to cinch the game, but the Birds were not satisfied, so Ronemus, a new outfielder, singled, Miller stopping at second base. Downs sacrificed, both runners advancing, Birkhead was thrown out at first but E. Beatty, the shortstop, drove a hard single to right field which scored both runners. This ended the scoring for the day.

CATARRH GONE SINCE HOYT'S CAME SAYS THIS MAN

Mr. George W. Payne, 1140 Lagonda Avenue, Springfield, Ohio, is another well known resident of this vicinity who is endorsing the Hoyt's Compound which is the great natural medicine now being sold every day in this city at Wilder's Drug Store.

MR. GEORGE W. PAYNE.

"For several months I have been in an unhealthy condition," said Mr. Payne. "Appetite was very poor and I was losing weight steadily. Bowels were sluggish and congested and forced me to take physics all the time and finally irritated my bowels to such an extent that I grew extremely nervous. Was always having gas pains and my blood was in a very poisoned condition and caused me to be tired and worn out all the time. I tried every kind of medicine I could hear of but nothing seemed to help and I had just about decided to give up my work when a friend advised me to try the Hoyt's Compound. I started taking it and today I am like an ENTIRELY DIFFERENT person. Have regained my appetite and am gaining rapidly in weight. It has certainly WORKED WONDERS in purifying my blood and took the poison right out of my system. I can say that this Hoyt's Compound has brought more relief than anything I have ever taken and above all it has ridded me of a bad case of catarrh which had troubled me for years. I cannot say enough in praise for this wonderful medicine and only hope that my endorsement proves the means of some other sufferer finding relief."

Hoyt's Compound is sold at Wilder's Drug Store, Circleville, Ohio. Also sold by all leading druggists everywhere.—Adv.

EAGLES TEAM ANNEX LEAGUE SECOND PLACE

Local Nine Makes Advance When Mt. Air Outfit Is Defeated Sunday.

The Circleville Eagles ball club stepped out Sunday and let the highly touted Mt. Air club down on the short end of a 7 to 4 score. By winning from them the Birds went into a tie for second place in the Central Ohio league.

The new battery which the management recently signed showed up good in this game and fans will see some neat work on their part during the balance of the season.

The Mt. Air team was resting in second place prior to Sunday's game and was considered the best team in the league by many of the Columbus sport writers. Old Fred Bruck, who did the chucking for them, has long been considered the best pitcher in Central Ohio and any team that knocks him out of the box must have a powerful attack. That is just what the local club did Sunday and they also used his successor mighty rough.

The Eagles started scoring early in the game. They pushed a run across in each the first, second and third innings, while Boyd, the new pitcher, held the Mt. Air batters at his mercy until the third inning when they chalked up their first run. They then tied the score by scoring a run in the fourth and fifth innings. Then both pitchers pitched air tight ball until the last half of the seventh when the Mounts shoved across a run to take the lead.

But, Birkhead, the first man up in the ninth inning singled solidly to center. He was promptly sacrificed to second by E. Beatty. Then A. Beatty crashed a long double over the center fielder's head to plate the fleet footed Birkhead with the tieing run.

The Mounts failed to score in their half of the ninth off of the slants served them by the veteran Lee Downs who took up the pitching duties after Boyd had been removed in favor of a pinch hitter in the ninth inning.

HITS LONG TRIPLE

Bob Wolford led off in the tenth inning with a long triple which traveled far over the right fielder's head striking the butt of a big tree which stood on the bank of the river. The ball bounded back into the field and it was only the tree that saved the drive from going for a home run.

It was a terrific smash. At this point of the game the veteran Fred Bruck was removed from the box and Red Bayes, another star hurler, was sent in to try to still the Circleville bats. Harvey Miller, a Circleville boy, greeted the new pitcher with a grass cutting single that scored Wolford with what was in reality enough to cinch the game, but the Birds were not satisfied, so Ronemus, a new outfielder, singled, Miller stopping at second base. Downs sacrificed, both runners advancing, Birkhead was thrown out at first but E. Beatty, the shortstop, drove a hard single to right field which scored both runners. This ended the scoring for the day.

CARE AND DIET WILL IMPROVE BAD TEETH

Cleanliness and Balanced Foods Two Important Factors in Overcoming Tooth Defects, Says Dr. Copeland; Don't Neglect These Treasures

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.
United States Senator from New York.
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

In North America, more than in any other part of the world, the teeth are given a lot of attention. I shall not admit that they have enough care, but we do better than they do across the ocean.

In England I was struck by the general neglect of these useful and beauty-giving organs. I am sure it is not a mere coincidence that so many observers note the same thing.

DR COPELAND

It is a pity that anywhere there should be neglect of a part of the body so important. Without sound teeth the food is not chewed as it should be.

But it does not end here. If there is continued neglect the teeth become abscessed and the gums are bathed in pus. This evil substance is absorbed into the system and then there is real trouble.

More and more, the medical profession is pointing out the bad effects of pus infection. Rheumatism, heart disease and many obscure ailments can be traced to such sources. Diseases of the kidneys and other serious afflictions, are thought to be made worse, if not actually caused, by pus infection.

There are many factors involved in a study of the whys and wherefores of bad teeth. I do not care to discuss the possible effect of heredity upon the quality of the teeth.

You know I am inclined to belittle heredity as an important consideration in disease production. I cannot bring myself to believe that we are "hog tied" to the sins or faults of our ancestors.

I must admit, of course, that a few rare ailments may be founded on heredity. In general, however, we can overcome the bad inheritance and through our own efforts sweep aside the shackles of birth. Let's not worry about our grandparents.

There is one thing we do get from our parents. I refer to the early teaching in matters of personal hygiene. We eat, sleep, exercise and bathe as we were taught in childhood. We should make sure for ourselves that we cannot do better than they did.

Improper feeding has much to do with the development of bad teeth. There used to be a disease, not much seen now, known as scurvy. Sailors, prisoners, inmates of asylums and others confined to limited quarters and fed on unsuitable food had scurvy. Thanks to better food and advanced knowledge we escape that old-fashioned ailment.

But we have now what we may call "hidden scurvy." If the mother's food is deficient or of wrong quality while the baby is being nursed there may be established in the infant such defects that the teeth, when they come, are not normal. A well-balanced diet will do away with this danger.

The teeth must be kept clean. No matter whether it is the youngster with his first teeth or the grown-up, it is essential that cleanliness be practiced. Sticky, sweet food will lodge between the teeth. There it ferments, forms acids, and the surface of the tooth is softened. Repeated day after day and night after night, what results? The beginning of a cavity is formed.

The teeth are too precious to neglect. Begin now to take the best of care of your possessions.

GRILL MRS. SNOOK

spied on Meyers when Meyers was in Miss Hix's company.

Attorneys for Snook who were dismissed from the Ohio State University faculty yesterday for "moral delinquency" divulged late today they would make no attempt to obtain his release on habeas corpus proceedings, adding that "thorough investigation" would clear him.

DRUGS ENTER CASE

A new development in the murder mystery today was the announcement of Assistant U. S. District Attorney W. B. Bartels that he would conduct a probe of persistent rumors that Dr. Snook and Miss Hix handled quantities of drugs.

William J. Ford, a federal narcotic agent, was delegated to make an investigation of the reports at Ohio State university.

County Prosecutor John N. Chester declared today that his investigators had definitely learned that Dr. Snook had taken the wife of a college employe to the university hospital while the woman was in a state of coma.

Either a dope field or a maniac killed the university co-ed, in the opinion of John F. Seidel, attorney for the Snooks.

The lawyer, in a statement to newspapermen, declared he believed that the murdered girl had been a dope fiend.

HAD THREE ROOMS

Charles Long, former doorman at the Y. W. C. A. here, was questioned by investigators today. He informed them that Miss Hix rented a room at the Y about March 1, last, and that Dr. Snook brought her to the door of the building "two or three times a week." Detectives later announced they had checked up on Long's statement and that it was correct.

That made three rooms which Miss Hix had at one time—the apartment which she shared with Dr. Snook, the room at the Y and a room in the university district in which she lived with two roommates.

GRANTED DIVORCE

Thomas McCrum, E. Franklinst, has been granted a divorce in the county courts from his wife, Dora McCrum, who was restored to her maiden name of Miss Dora Coey, he announced Tuesday.

"Flu" Not New Disease

Before the great influenza epidemic, shortly after the World war few persons had ever heard of the "flu." But it is no new disease by any means. The United States public health service tells us that as early as 400 B. C. Hippocrates, "father of medicine," attributed influenza to changes in the wind. At various other times since then earthquakes, comets, volcanoes, floods and other natural phenomena have been suggested by medical men as causes. Even after 24 centuries science knows little about this malady and the almost unbelievable speed with which it spreads.—Capper's Weekly.

Christens Crack Train

Pretty seventeen-year-old Wilma Stein, of Seattle, Wash., was chosen to represent and christen the "New Olympian," new crack train operating between Seattle andn Chicago in 61 1-2 hours. The beauty and grace of Miss Stein are symbolic of the handsome lines of the new express, which she sent on its way with a parting message.

BIBLE THOUGHT

PERSECUTION PLEDGES POSSESSIONS— Blessed are they which are persecuted for righteousness' sake, for theirs is the kingdom of heaven. — Matthew 5:10.

THE TRADE OF GUNMEN

Much of the news of today is highly colored and sensational, but we do not always see how it differs from that of former years. One of the sinister new developments is the rise of a type of people ordinarily referred to as gunmen or gangsters. These people are one of the worst types ever developed in the history of the world. They are reckless fellows, ready for brutal enterprises, and to use their weapons for a price against anyone whose presence is deemed inconvenient.

It is customary to blame all these developments on the World war, and it could hardly be denied that that had much to do with it. Durng such a war as the last one, the spectacle was presented for four years, of human life being blotted out on a vast scale. A great many coarse and brutal people acquire a contempt for human life, and they were ready to take it on slight provocation, particularly if they were paid a price for so doing. Hence the trade of gunmen.

But the whole blame for such characters can not be placed on the war. These ceatures must have escaped early from home control. They came in contact with good influences in the schools, but their hard hearts did not respond to appeals to virtue. They learned enough from books so they could make a fairly good appearance, but they refused to accept any moral lessons.

The coarse hearts of these brutal gunmen will not in many cases be softened, though the right kind of penal treatment sometimes works wonders with tough criminals. But the community has its chance to prevent a new generation of such desperate characters from coming up to plague it . If every boy had a chance to develop a normal mentality, an opportunity for normal play to work off his spirit of adventure, we should have few gunmen and gangsters.

THE MANY WHO LOST

It is a bit unsettling to us ordinary folks to read about the half-dozen lucky ones who held winning tickets in the English Derby lotteries.

An Irish widow gets a quarter of a million; an Indianapolis janitor gets some $80,000; a Calcutta clerk draws down $100,000— and so on. Reading these stories, one's natural conclusion is that the best way to get along in life is to spend all one's money on lottery tickets.

But, of course, there's another side to it. All of the money that these people won came from scores of thousands of other people who bought tickets and did not win. There were half a dozen winners and a couple of hundred thousand losers.

That's the way it always is with speculation. We let the successes dazzle us, but we forget about the much larger number of failures.

Almanacs Once Prohibited

Almanacs date back to early civilization. It is known that the Greeks and Romans had them Some of the oldest almanacs in existence were published during the Thirteenth and Fourteenth centuries. The Almanach Liegecis was typical in that it contained dire prophecies. This almanac, which became famous by predicting the end of Mme. Du Barry's career found a great circulation in rural France, and provided, for those who could not read, an easily understood system of symbols. So great was the influence of these almanacs over superstitious people that at one time almanacs were prohibited in France.

HOPES TO WIN SCHNEIDER CUP WITH MYSTERY PLANE

United States Navy Working on Ship to Develop 340 Miles an Hour.

Washington.—Out at the naval aircraft factory in Philadelphia mechanics are working on a strange appearing plane, tearing it down from biplane to a monoplane.

The workroom is closely guarded and none may pass in or out without special permission, for it is with this mystery craft Lieut. Al Williams of the United States navy hopes to win the Schneider cup race for America and break all air-speed records.

Lieutenant Williams, one of the most daring flyers in the service, has remarked to friends that unless the plane will turn up 340 miles an hour he may not enter it. Three hundred and forty miles an hour—nearly six miles a minute—an almost inconceivable speed.

And Lieutenant Williams had good reason for his remark, for reports have reached here that the Italian entry in the races, to be piloted by Major de Bernardi, has tested up to 350 miles an hour.

However, this does not mean the fastest plane will win, but it does mean that an entry must have the ability to come near the fastest plane, or close to 350 miles an hour, to capture speed honors.

Lieutenant Williams' plane is financed by the Mercury Aircraft corporation, an organization of New York and Eastern sportsmen interested in seeing America recover honors in the seaplane races.

The American mystery plane was built first as a biplane, it was said, and later torn down for reconstruction into a monoplane, which Williams believes will produce more speed.

It is powered by a 24-cylinder Packard X type engine, developing 1,200 horse power.

When the plane is completed it will be virtually a flying engine with barely enough room for the pilot to squeeze himself into the cockpit.

The present seaplane speed record is held by De Bernardi at 318.6 miles per hour. It was established in March a year ago.

However, a British plane with much less speed piloted by Lieutenant Webster, won the Schneider race last year at 286.6 miles per hour.

Lieutenant Williams prepared a seaplane for the 1928 races, but it failed to develop sufficient speed, so it was not entered.

The National Aeronautic association filed a blank entry for this year's race, to be held September 6-7 in England off the Isle of Wight.

British Test Improved Type of Machine Gun

London.—A new one-man machine gun, which is self-loading, is being experimented with by the British war office and, if eventually adopted, is likely to have an important influence on battle tactics in the future.

The new gun weighs only one-half pound more than the present standard army rifle, but it is said to be an infinitely more effective weapon. In addition to firing at more than double the rate of the present rifle it is understood to enable more accurate shooting, because the action being automatic the soldier is given more time to aim. Further, there is less recoil.

It can be fired from the shoulder and can be set for semiautomatic or full automatic firing. The new weapon is based on a design of Gen. John Thompson of the United States army, but the original design is understood to have been considerably improved by the Birmingham Small Arms company, who have been experimenting with it for two years.

One problem that has yet to be worked out is that of the maintenance of sufficient supplies of ammuntion for the soldier, but it is probable that this will be solved in the same way it was when machine guns were introduced.

Modern Dancing Finds Favor in Jerusalem

Jerusalem.—The modern dancing craze has spread to the Arabs of the Middle East, where the publication of the first book in the language of the desert denizens on "latest methods for learning modern dances" enables the city youth a few generations removed from the black, goat-haired tent to keep as up to date as the Western man about town in the newest steps.

The Arab booklet was written by Naim Azar, member of the "Union of Dance Teachers" in France, and of the Academy of Dance Masters in Paris. The book has two prefaces, written by Paul Raymend of the Paris opera, and Mme. G. Lefort, president of the Academy of the Dance Masters in Paris. To judge by the keenness with which the East is studying the intricacies of the latest dances, the book should soon run into a few editions.

Regular Chinese Armies Have 1,500,000 Soldiers

Peking.—There are just over 1,500,000 men in the officially recognized armies of China today, according to the official reports of the various military commanders as reported to Kuo Min, the Chinese official news agency. These do not include the numerous bandit organizations.

Here's a New One

New York.—Unquestionably, in the opinion of Dr. John H. Hiss of Columbus, Ohio, one of the reasons for divorce suits is the wife's corns. He gave his opinion at the convention of the Eastern Osteophatic association.

ENVY

Daphne by HAZEL LIVINGSTON

CHAPTER XXXV.

BUT Daphne had gone, and though Mrs. Halliday and Mrs. Spellman listened for fifteen minutes, ears glued to cracks, Flora didn't say another word, and you couldn't tell whether the little Haines girl was going to listen to reason or not.

For three hours she had been nerving herself to it, trying different ways of saying it, over in her mind. "I saw Crystal the other day!"—but that was a queer way to start—and "I wonder where Crystal is now," was just as funny, and it wasn't true either...

"You're awfully quiet tonight!" he laughed, and she blushed, and said "Am I?" and couldn't think of anything else to say, and they drove on, still silently. They'd soon be home now, and she'd have to hurry, if it were ever to be said.

"You know I get awfully sick of taxi-ing you around this way," he said, still banteringly. "Just like a couple of homeless bums. Not even a kitchen to hold hands in. Not even—"

"You mean . . . you don't like to take me riding?"

"Of course I like to take you riding, but hang it, I like to park once in a while when I'm with a pretty girl——"

A pretty girl! Was that all she was to him, a pretty girl? Was that what Flora meant? She gulped. "We don't ride all the time. We do park sometimes——"

He stopped the car, and kissed her, laughing all the while. "You'll be the death of me yet? When are you going to grow up? Never mind, that's one of the reasons I'm so crazy about you. I am crazy about you. Do you know that, Daphne?"

But for once she didn't thrill to his nearness, her heart was too heavy. Pretty girl... parking... petting . . . Crystal . . . All the troubled thoughts shifted and darted about, forming kaleidoscope patterns of misery in her mind . . . He meant it wasn't any fun coming to her house to call for her, and driving aimlessly around . . . He didn't have to taxi Crystal around, Crystal had a place to bring him, a place

"I'm sorry I haven't a wonderful place like Crystal!" she burst out bitterly, and could have bitten her tongue. Thinking about it all evening, and then saying it that way!

But he didn't notice the bitterness. "Pretty nice, all right," he agreed warmly. "I like a place like that, it's kind of homey with all those nice comfortable chairs. That's what I said the first time I saw it. None of those antique effects for me . . . say—I didn't know your two kids had gotten together! What do you know about that!"

"We haven't."

"You haven't? Then how did you—I mean how did you know all about her place? I thought it was funny she didn't say anything about meeting you. You know how Crystal is, right out with everything — no holding anything back——"

"You didn't say anything either!" she said accusingly. "You never told me you were seeing her all the time. I—I just happened to find out, that's all!"

In the flash of a street lamp he saw her tense white face, and thought with amusement, "The kid's jealous!" So he said, humoring her, "You told me not to tell the folks you were in town, so I haven't said a word. Well—naturally — I kept Crystal's little secret, too. She's here at art school, pretty near killing herself. They work 'em like dogs there, and it's a shame, too Night and day. It isn't right. You know she isn't strong either."

Crystal not strong! Daphne fought a wild desire to laugh. But he was well started on his subject now. "I wish you'd let me tell her you're here. She's lonely I think, and nervous. You know how keen she is on that art of hers. And then her mother . . . you don't mind if I knock the old lady a little, Daphne?"

"I don't like her, either," Daphne said honestly.

"Well, it seems that the old lady keeps writing Crystal all the time, telling her how hard up they are——"

"Hard up!"

"Yes, short of money. I didn't believe it at first, but I ran into a fellow at the bank the other day who was talking about some orchard land in that district. Seems that your father has borrowed a lot on it. I don't want to alarm you, Daphne, but from what I hear he's going to lose the property. Say, what's wrong with him, anyway? When I was a kid people used to hold him up as an example of thrift —Abner Haines who had three cents out of the first nickel he ever made, and then all of a sudden he kind of went haywire—began spending money like a drunken sailor——"

"He spent it on my stepmother," Daphne said hotly, "she never gave him a minute's peace, she was right after him every minute, she — ... oh well — no use talking about it!" She stopped, frightened at what she had almost said about Crystal...you can't tell things like that, and still if you don't...

"You don't know what it was like in our house!" she finished desperately, fighting temptation to say something about Crystal, some little word that would make him see, if he had any sense...She searched his face in the dim light. He must see, surely he must see that the money was spent on Crystal, that she was like her mother, heartless, cruel...

Ralph was speaking, "You bet I do know what you poor kids had to put up with. Crystal told me often enough. Gee it must have been a cat and dog life. You were lucky you had her to look out for you."

Lucky to have Crystal! Crystal who made all the trouble, who stole her Paisley shawl, who was the reason for the big loans on the orchards... "Oh!" she said. A funny, choked "Oh!"—and that was all.

Just before they parted at Mrs. Hinckle's door he said, "And you won't let me tell Crystal where you are?"

"No. Not—not yet—"

"Daphne Haines, do you mean you haven't written home yet? Your own father doesn't know where you are?" He was looking at her accusingly. Fine daughter, you are, he seemed to say.

"They don't care—" she murmured, half in her handkerchief.

"Don't care! Oh come now, Daphne, that's childish. Of course they care. You ought to be ashamed of making them worry, you ought really. Write to them, that's a good kid—will you?"

Two big tears gathered in her eyes. The utter hopelessness of it, of ever making him understand, overwhelmed her. Instead of saving him from Crystal, she had let him think she needed to be saved from her own selfishness!

"Go on—write to your old dad. I wish to God mine was still alive to write to. I wouldn't be in the pickle I am today—"

"What pickle, Ralph—" her arms went out to him—"tell me!"

"Oh—nothing. Just general, I mean." He shook his powerful shoulders, as if to shake the troubled thoughts away. "Well—are you going to do as I say?"

She hesitated. What did it matter? "All right," she agreed listlessly. "I'll write. But don't tell Crystal yet. Promise?"

He promised, bid her a hasty, teasing goodbye, and bounded down the rickety steps two at a time feeling better than he had for days. Pretty nice to bring a girl and her father together again. He'd have the two girls crying in each others' arms next. . . . But though the picture of the two sisters with their arms entwined appealed to him he couldn't quite see Daphne in the role.

"She's a hard, independent little thing," he thought, and a shade of disapproval crossed his handsome face. "Crystal's so different. Of course, they really aren't sisters at all. Well — I guess there aren't many like Crystal—all heart, and no head . . . poor little thing working herself to death to become a great artist, and save the family fortunes!"

He parked the car, turned out the lights, and went leisurely to his comfortable apartment, and bed.

And in Mrs. Hinkle's back parlor, with the brown walls, and the faded green carpet, and the old Turkey-red couch, Daphne sat at her little table, trying to keep her promise, and write. "Dear Father," she wrote, in her neat, schoolgirl hand . . . dear father . . . She dropped her aching head on the table, and cried.

THEATERS

"GIVE AND TAKE"

"Give and Take," the Universal comedy Special which opens at the Grand theatre tonight, touches one of the modern phases of business and shows the advantages and disadvantages of the system whereby the employees share in the profits of the company for which they work.

The story concerns a fruit canng factory. The owner has built up his business step by step, bearing the entire responsibility of financing it. His son returns from college and feeling that he is a member of the firm, and should demonstrate fair play to the employee, endeavors to put the business on a profit-sharing basis.

Jean Hersholt, famous character star, plays the role of Bauer, owner of the factory and father of young Jack Bauer. George Sidney who enacts the role of Kruger, lifelong friend of Bauer, gives one of his inimitable characterizations and causes laughs galore in this excellent comedy-drama.

George Lewis as young Jack Bauer and Sharon Lynn as his sweetheart have the juvinile leads and carry the love interest of the story.

2 ALIBI VERSIONS

One of the best known police officials in the United States is authority for the statement that never before has such real police atmosphere been incorporated in a motion picture as in "Alibi," the United Artists film thrilling crowds at the Cliftona Theater.

The official is Captain John McCaleb, commander of the Hollywood police department, who is as well known in the film capital as Charles Chaplin, Douglas Fairbanks or any of the stars.

"This picture shows crooks and police as they really are, not as fictionists most of the time depict them to the public," said the captain.

"West shows up gangsters and their ilk as cowards in the long run. And the actors who play the roles in 'Alibi' act like real crooks and real police, not like actors."

JACK HOLT AT MET

Jack Holt, popular portrayer of Zane Grey characters on the screen in Paramount pictures, does not need to simulate the character of virile men as sketched in Grey's novels, for his actual experience in life has fitted him for the roles.

The artist graduated from Virginia Military Institute and went to Oregon to take up civil engineering. While there, came the news of a copper strike in Alaska and Holt joined the rush to the north country. In Alaska he drove a dog team for Uncle Sam carrying the mails, and hunted and explored all over the wild territory. Here his experiences with "bad men" etc., were not unlike that which he experiences in Zane Grey stories.

Holt's most recent film role is that of a U. S. Marshal in Grey's "Sunset Pass." Nora Lane, Chester Conklin, John Loder, Guy Oliver and others are featured in the cast. Otto Brower directed. The picture will be at the Met theater Tuesday and Wednesday.

Tough Man to Beat

Tommy Armour won the Open at Oakmont, Chicago, Ill., in 1927, and has been knocking off some smaller titles since. Tommy is running a free lance career as a pro, but the effort it took to make the grade is another story. Tommy was pretty badly banged up in the "big push" and his 70's turned into 90's, with a stiffened arm and a blinded eye. But he went hard at making his game over. Enough comment to say he is back in the top flight again and will be a serious contender over the Wingfoot course at New York when the National Open gets under way.

Invention That Would Dispel Fogs Awaited

No practical way has as yet been found for dispelling fogs, declare weather bureau meteorologists. Many schemes have been advanced for the artificial dissipation of fog, but the places that have always been notorious for the thickness of their atmosphere still have their murk.

Shortly before the World war the city of Lyons, France, voted money for preventing the formation of fog in that city by coating the Rivers Rhone and Saone with oil. About the same time the Cottrell process of electrical precipitation, which is successfully applied in treating industrial dusts and fumes, was tried on the fogs of the California coast, but nothing seems to have resulted. The naval aircraft factory at Philadelphia has tried to eliminate mists by means of electrified sprays, but no tangible results have been announced. Schemes for draining off fog-laden air from flying fields and for warming the air over such places and thus causing the fog to evaporate have been investigated and found impracticable.

On a small scale and in favorable circumstances fog can be dispelled, say the meteorologists, but all known methods are too costly for commercial use.

BIBLE THOUGHT

PERSECUTION PLEDGES POSSESSIONS— Blessed are they which are persecuted for righteousness' sake, for theirs is the kingdom of heaven. — Matthew 5:10.

THE TRADE OF GUNMEN

Much of the news of today is highly colored and sensational, but we do not always see how it differs from that of former years. One of the sinister new developments is the rise of a type of people ordinarily referred to as gunmen or gangsters. These people are one of the worst types ever developed in the history of the world. They are reckless fellows, ready for brutal enterprises, and to use their weapons for a price against anyone whose presence is deemed inconvenient.

It is customary to blame all these developments on the World war, and it could hardly be denied that that had much to do with it. During such a war as the last one, the spectacle was presented for four years, of human life being blotted out on a vast scale. A great many coarse and brutal people acquire a contempt for human life, and they were ready to take it on slight provocation, particularly if they were paid a price for so doing. Hence the trade of gunmen.

But the whole blame for such characters can not be placed on the war. These ceatures must have escaped early from home control They came in contact with good influences in the schools, but their hard hearts did not respond to appeals to virtue. They learned enough from books so they could make a fairly good appearance, but they refused to accept any moral lessons.

The coarse hearts of these brutal gunmen will not in many cases be softened, though the right kind of penal treatment sometimes works wonders with tough criminals. But the community has its chance to prevent a new generation of such desperate characters from coming up to plague it . If every boy had a chance to develop a normal mentality, an opportunity for normal play to work off his spirit of adventure, we should have few gunmen and gangsters.

THE MANY WHO LOST

It is a bit unsettling to us ordinary folks to read about the half-dozen lucky ones who held winning tickets in the English Derby lotteries.

An Irish widow gets a quarter of a million; an Indianapolis janitor gets some $80,000; a Calcutta clerk draws down $100,000— and so on. Reading these stories, one's natural conclusion is that the best way to get along in life is to spend all one's money on lottery tickets.

But, of course, there's another side to it. All of the money that these people won came from scores of thousands of other people who bought tickets and did not win. There were half a dozen winners and a couple of hundred thousand losers.

That's the way it always is with speculation. We let the successes dazzle us, but we forget about the much larger number of failures

Washington.—Out at the naval aircraft factory in Philadelphia mechanics are working on a strange appearing plane, tearing it down from biplane to a monoplane.

The workroom is closely guarded and none may pass in or out without special permission, for it is with this mystery craft Lieut. Al Williams of the United States navy hopes to win the Schneider cup race for America and break all air-speed records.

Lieutenant Williams, one of the most daring fliers in the service, has remarked to friends that unless the plane will turn up 340 miles an hour he may not enter it. Three hundred and forty miles an hour—nearly six miles a minute—an almost inconceivable speed.

And Lieutenant Williams had good reason for his remark, for reports have reached here that the Italian entry in the races, to be piloted by Major de Bernardi, has tested up to 350 miles an hour.

However, this does not mean the fastest plane will win, but it does mean that an entry must have the ability to come near the fastest plane, or close to 350 miles an hour, to capture speed honors.

Lieutenant Williams' plane is financed by the Mercury Aircraft corporation, an organization of New York and Eastern sportsmen interested in seeing America recover honors in the seaplane races.

The American mystery plane was built first as a biplane, it was said, and later torn down for reconstruction into a monoplane, which Williams believes will produce more speed.

It is powered by a 24-cylinder Packard X type engine, developing 1,200 horse power.

When the plane is completed it will be virtually a flying engine with barely enough room for the pilot to squeeze himself into the cockpit.

The present seaplane speed record is held by De Bernardi at 318.6 miles per hour. It was established in March a year ago.

However, a British plane with much less speed piloted by Lieutenant Webster, won the Schneider race last year at 286.6 miles per hour.

Lieutenant Williams prepared a seaplane for the 1928 races, but it failed to develop sufficient speed, so it was not entered.

The National Aeronautic association filed a blank entry for this year's race, to be held September 6-7 in England off the Isle of Wight.

British Test Improved Type of Machine Gun

London.—A new one-man machine gun, which is self-loading, is being experimented with by the British war office and, if eventually adopted, is likely to have an important influence on battle tactics in the future.

The new gun weighs only one half pound more than the present standard army rifle, but it is said to be an infinitely more effective weapon In addition to firing at more than double the rate of the present rifle it is understood to enable more accurate shooting, because the action being automatic the soldier is given more time to aim Further, there is less recoil.

It can be fired from the shoulder and can be set for semiautomatic or full automatic firing The new weapon is based on a design of Gen. John Thompson of the United States army, but the original design is understood to have been considerably improved by the Birmingham Small Arms company, who have been experimenting with it for two years.

One problem that has yet to be worked out is that of the maintenance of sufficient supplies of ammunition for the soldier, but it is probable that this will be solved in the same way it was when machine guns were introduced.

Modern Dancing Finds Favor in Jerusalem

Jerusalem.—The modern dancing craze has spread to the Arabs of the Middle East, where the publication of the first book in the language of the desert denizens on "latest methods for learning modern dances" enables the city youth a few generations removed from the black, goat haired tent to keep as up to date as the Western man about town in the newest steps.

The Arab booklet was written by Naim Azar, member of the "Union of Dance Teachers" in France, and of the Academy of Dance Masters in Paris. The book has two prefaces written by Paul Raymond of the Paris opera, and Mme G. Lefort, president of the Academy of the Dance Masters in Paris. To judge by the keenness with which the East is studying the intricacies of the latest dances, the book should soon run into a few editions.

Regular Chinese Armies Have 1,500,009 Soldiers

Peking.—There are just over 1,500,000 men in the official recognized armies of China today, according to the official reports of the various military commanders as reported to Kuo Min, the Chinese official news agency. These do not include the numerous bandit organizations

Daphne by HAZEL LIVINGSTON

CHAPTER XXXV.

BUT Daphne had gone, and though Mrs. Halliday and Mrs. Spellman listened for fifteen minutes, ears glued to cracks, Flora didn't say another word, and you couldn't tell whether the little Haines girl was going to listen to reason or not.

For three hours she had been nerving herself to it, trying different ways of saying it, over in her mind. "I saw Crystal the other day!"—but that was a queer way to start—and "I wonder where Crystal is now," was just as funny, and it wasn't true either...

"You're awfully quiet tonight!" he laughed, and she blushed, and said "Am I?" and couldn't think of anything else to say, and they drove on, still silently. They'd soon be home now, and she'd have to hurry, if it were ever to be said.

"You know I get awfully sick of taxi-ing you around this way," he said, still banteringly. "Just like a couple of homeless bums. Not even a kitchen to hold hands in. Not even—"

"You mean . . . you don't like to take me riding?"

"Of course I like to take you riding, but hang it, I like to park once in a while when I'm with a pretty girl——"

A pretty girl! Was that all she was to him, a pretty girl? Was that what Flora meant? She gulped. "We don't ride all the time. We do park sometimes——"

He stopped the car, and kissed her, laughing all the while. "You'll be the death of me yet? When are you going to grow up? Never mind, that's one of the reasons I'm so crazy about you. I am crazy about you. Do you know that, Daphne?"

But for once she didn't thrill to his nearness, her heart was too heavy. Pretty girl... parking... petting . . . Crystal . . . All the troubled thoughts shifted and darted about, forming kaleidoscope patterns of misery in her mind . . . He meant it wasn't any fun coming to her house to call for her, and driving aimlessly around . . . He didn't have to taxi Crystal around, Crystal had a place to bring him, a place .

"I'm sorry I haven't a wonderful place like Crystal!" she burst out bitterly, and could have bitten her tongue. Thinking about it all evening, and then saying it that way!

But he didn't notice the bitterness. "Pretty nice, all right," he agreed warmly. "I like a place like that, it's kind of homey with all those nice comfortable chairs. That's what I said the first time I saw it. None of those antique effects for me . . . say—I didn't know your two kids had gotten together! What do you know about that!"

"We haven't."

"You haven't? Then how did you—I mean how did you know all about her place? I thought it was funny she didn't say anything about meeting you. You know how Crystal is, right out with everything — no holding anything back——"

"You didn't say anything either!" she said accusingly. "You never told me you were seeing her all the time. I—I just happened to find out, that's all!"

In the flash of a street lamp he saw her tense white face, and thought with amusement, "The kid's jealous!" So he said, humoring her, "You told me not to tell the folks you were in town, so I haven't said a word. Well—naturally—I kept Crystal's little secret, too. She's here at art school, pretty near killing herself. They work 'em like dogs there, and it's a shame, too Night and day. It isn't right. You know she isn't strong either."

Crystal not strong! Daphne fought a wild desire to laugh. But he was well started on his subject now. "I wish you'd let me tell her you're here. She's lonely I think, and nervous. You know how keen she is on that art of hers And then her mother . . . you don't mind if I knock the old lady a little, Daphne?"

"I don't like her, either," Daphne said honestly.

"Well, it seems that the old lady keeps writing Crystal all the time, telling her how hard up they are——"

"Hard up!"

"Yes, short of money. I didn't believe it at first, but I ran into a fellow at the bank the other day who was talking about some orchard land in that district. Seems that your father has borrowed a lot on it. I don't want to alarm you, Daphne, but from what I hear he's going to lose the property. Say, what's wrong with him, anyway? When I was a kid people used to hold him up as an example of thrift—Abner Haines who had three cents out of the first nickel he ever made, and then all of a sudden he kind of went haywire—began spending money like a drunken sailor——"

"He spent it on my stepmother," Daphne said hotly, "she never gave him a minute's peace, she was right after him every minute, she — . . . oh well — no use talking about it!" She stopped, frightened at what she had almost said about Crystal...you can't tell things like that, and still if you don't...

"You don't know what it was like in our house!" she finished desperately, fighting temptation to say something about Crystal, some little word that would make him see, if he had any sense...She searched his face in the dim light. He must see, surely he must see that the money was spent on Crystal, that she was like her mother, heartless, cruel...

Ralph was speaking. "You bet I do know what you poor kids had to put up with. Crystal told me often enough. Gee it must have been a cat and dog life You were lucky you had her to look out for you."

Lucky to have Crystal! Crystal who made all the trouble who stole her Paisley shawl, who was the reason for the big loans on the orchards... "Oh!" she said. A funny, choked "Oh!"—and that was all.

Just before they parted at Mrs. Hinckle's door he said, "And you won't let me tell Crystal where you are?"

"No. Not—not yet—"

"Daphne Haines, do you mean you haven't written home yet? Your own father doesn't know where you are?" He was looking at her accusingly. Fine daughter, you are, he seemed to say.

"They don't care—" she murmured, half in her handkerchief.

"Don't care! Oh come now, Daphne, that's childish. Of course they care. You ought to be ashamed of making them worry, you ought really. Write to them, that's a good kid—will you?"

Two big tears gathered in her eyes. The utter hopelessness of it, of ever making him understand, overwhelmed her. Instead of saving him from Crystal, she had let him think she needed to be saved from her own selfishness!

"Go on—write to your old dad. I wish to God mine was still alive to write to. I wouldn't be in the pickle I am today—"

"What pickle, Ralph—" her arms went out to him—"tell me!"

"Oh—nothing. Just general, I mean." He shook his powerful shoulders, as if to shake the troubled thoughts away. "Well—are you going to do as I say?"

She hesitated. What did it matter? "All right," she agreed listlessly. "I'll write. But don't tell Crystal yet. Promise?"

He promised, bid her a hasty, teasing goodbye, and bounded down the rickety steps two at a time feeling better than he had for days. Pretty nice to bring a girl and her father together again. He'd have the two girls crying in each others' arms next. . . . But though the picture of the two sisters with their arms entwined appealed to him he couldn't quite see Daphne in the role.

"She's a hard, independent little thing," he thought, and a shade of disapproval crossed his handsome face. "Crystal's so different. Of course, they really aren't sisters at all. Well—I guess there aren't many like Crystal—all heart, and no head . . . poor little thing working herself to death to become a great artist, and save the family fortunes!"

He parked the car, turned out the lights, and went leisurely to his comfortable apartment, and bed.

And in Mrs. Hinkle's back parlor, with the brown walls, and the faded green carpet, and the old Turkey-red couch, Daphne sat at her little table, trying to keep her promise, and write. "Dear Father," she wrote, in her neat, schoolgirl hand . . . dear father . . . She dropped her aching head on the table, and cried.

THEATERS

"Give and Take," the Universal comedy Special which opens at the Grand theatre tonight, touches one of the modern phases of business and shows the advantages and disadvantages of the system whereby the employees share in the profits of the company for which they work.

The story concerns a fruit canning factory. The owner has built up his business step by step, bearing the entire responsibility of financing it. His son returns from college and feeling that he is a member of the firm, and should demonstrate fair play to the employee, endeavors to put the business on a profit-sharing basis.

Jean Hersholt, famous character star, plays the role of Bauer, owner of the factory and father of young Jack Bauer. George Sidney who enacts the role of Kruger, lifelong friend of Bauer, gives one of his inimitable characterizations and causes laughs galore in this excellent comedy-drama.

George Lewis as young Jack Bauer and Sharon Lynn as his sweetheart have the juvinile leads and carry the love interest of the story.

2 ALIBI VERSIONS

One of the best known police officials in the United States is authority for the statement that never before has such real police atmosphere been incorporated in a motion picture as in "Alibi," the United Artists film thrilling crowds at the Cliftona Theater.

The official is Captain John McCaleb, commander of the Hollywood police department, who is as well known in the film capital as Charles Chaplin, Douglas Fairbanks or any of the stars.

"This picture shows crooks and police as they really are, not as fictionists most of the time depict them to the public," said the captain

"West shows up gangsters and their ilk as cowards in the long run. And the actors who play the roles in 'Alibi' act like real crooks and real police, not like actors."

JACK HOLT AT MET

Jack Holt, popular portrayer of Zane Grey characters on the screen in Paramount pictures, does not need to simulate the character of virile men as sketched in Grey's novels, for his actual experience in life has fitted him for the roles.

The artist graduated from Virginia Military Institute and went to Oregon to take up civil engineering. While there, came the news of a copper strike in Alaska and Holt joined the rush to the north country. In Alaska he drove a dog team for Uncle Sam carrying the mails, and hunted and explored all over the wild territory Here his experiences with "bad men" etc., were not unlike that which he experiences in Zane Grey stories

Holt's most recent film role is that of a U. S. Marshal in Grey's "Sunset Pass" Nora Lane, Chester Conklin, John Loder, Guy Oliver and others are featured in the cast. Otto Brower directed. The picture will be at the Met theater Tuesday and Wednesday.

Tough Man to Bust

Tommy Armour won the Open at Oakmont, Chicago, Ill., in 1927, and has been knocking off some smaller titles since. Tommy is running a free lance career as a pro, but the effort it took to make the grade is another story. Tommy was pretty badly banged up in the "big push" and his 70's turned into 90's, with a stiffened arm and a blinded eye. But he went hard at making his game over. Enough comment to say he is back in the top flight again and will be a serious contender over the Wingfoot course at New York when the National Open gets under way.

Invention That Would Dispel Fogs Awaited

No practical way has as yet been found for dispelling fogs, declare weather bureau meteorologists. Many schemes have been advanced for the artificial dissipation of fog, but the places that have always been notorious for the thickness of their atmosphere still have their murk.

Shortly before the World war the city of Lyons, France, voted money for preventing the formation of fog in that city by coating the Rivers Rhone and Saone with oil. About the same time the Cottrell process of electrical precipitation, which is successfully applied in treating industrial dusts and fumes, was tried on the fogs of the California coast, but nothing seems to have resulted. The naval aircraft factory at Philadelphia has tried to eliminate mists by means of electrified sprays, but no tangible results have been announced. Schemes for draining off fog-laden air from flying fields and for warming the air over such places and thus causing the fog to evaporate have been investigated and found impracticable.

On a small scale and in favorable circumstances fog can be dispelled, say the meteorologists, but all known methods are too costly for commercial use.

CARE AND DIET WILL IMPROVE BAD TEETH

Cleanliness and Balanced Foods Two Important Factors in Overcoming Tooth Defects, Says Dr. Copeland; Don't Neglect These Treasures

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.
United States Senator from New York.
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

In North America, more than in any other part of the world, the teeth are given a lot of attention. I shall not admit that they have enough care, but we do better than they do across the ocean.

In England I was struck by the general neglect of these useful and beauty-giving organs. I am sure it is not a mere coincidence that so many observers note the same thing.

DR COPELAND

It is a pity that anywhere there should be neglect of a part of the body so important. Without sound teeth the food is not chewed as it should be.

But it does not end here. If there is continued neglect the teeth become abscessed and the gums are bathed in pus. This evil substance is absorbed into the system and then there is real trouble.

More and more, the medical profession is pointing out the bad effects of pus infection. Rheumatism, heart disease and many obscure ailments can be traced to such sources. Diseases of the kidneys and other serious afflictions, are thought to be made worse, if not actually caused, by pus infection.

There are many factors involved in a study of the whys and wherefores of bad teeth. I do not care to discuss the possible effect of heredity upon the quality of the teeth.

You know I am inclined to belittle heredity as an important consideration in disease production. I cannot bring myself to believe that we are "hog tied" to the sins or faults of our ancestors.

I must admit, of course, that a few rare ailments may be founded on heredity. In general, however, we can overcome the bad inheritance and through our own efforts sweep aside the shackles of birth. Let's not worry about our grandparents.

There is one thing we do get from our parents. I refer to the early teaching in matters of personal hygiene. We eat, sleep, exercise and bathe as we were taught in childhood. We should make sure for ourselves that we cannot do better than they did.

Improper feeding has much to do with the development of bad teeth. There used to be a disease, not much seen now, known as scurvy. Sailors, prisoners, inmates of asylums and others confined to limited quarters and fed on unsuitable food had scurvy. Thanks to better food and advanced knowledge we escape that old-fashioned ailment.

But we have now what we may call "hidden scurvy." If the mother's food is deficient or of wrong quality while the baby is being nursed there may be established in the infant such defects that the teeth, when they come, are not normal. A well-balanced diet will do away with this danger.

The teeth must be kept clean. No matter whether it is the youngster with his first teeth or the grown-up, it is essential that cleanliness be practiced. Sticky, sweet food will lodge between the teeth. There it ferments, forms acids, and the surface of the tooth is softened. Repeated day after day and night after night, what results? The beginning of a cavity is formed.

The teeth are too precious to neglect. Begin now to take the best of care of your possessions.

spied on Meyers when Meyers was in Miss Hix's company.

Attorneys for Snook who were dismissed from the Ohio State University faculty yesterday for "moral delinquency" divulged late today they would make no attempt to obtain his release on habeas corpus proceedings, adding that "thorough investigation" would clear him.

DRUGS ENTER CASE

A new development in the murder mystery today was the announcement of Assistant U. S. District Attorney W. B. Bartels that he would conduct a probe of persistent rumors that Dr. Snook and Miss Hix handled quantities of drugs.

William J. Ford, a federal narcotic agent, was delegated to make an investigation of the reports at Ohio State university.

County Prosecutor John N. Chester declared today that his investigators had definitely learned that Dr. Snook had taken the wife of a college employe to the university hospital while the woman was in a state of coma.

Either a dope field or a maniac killed the university co-ed, in the opinion of John F. Seidel, attorney for the Snooks.

The lawyer, in a statement to newspapermen, declared he believed that the murdered girl had been a dope fiend.

HAD THREE ROOMS

Charles Long, former doorman at the Y. W. C. A. here, was questioned by investigators today. He informed them that Miss Hix rented a room at the Y about March 1, last, and that Dr. Snook brought her to the door of the building "two or three times a week." Detectives later announced they had checked up on Long's statement and that it was correct.

That made three rooms which Miss Hix had at one time—the apartment which she shared with Dr. Snook, the room at the Y and a room in the university district in which she lived with two room mates.

GRANTED DIVORCE

Thomas McCrum, E. Franklinst, has been granted a divorce in the county courts from his wife, Dora McCrum, who was restored to her maiden name of Miss Dora Coey, he announced Tuesday.

"Flu" Not New Disease

Before the great influenza epidemic, shortly after the World war few persons had ever heard of the "flu." But it is no new disease by any means. The United States public health service tells us that as early as 400 B. C. Hippocrates, "father of medicine," attributed influenza to changes in the wind. At various other times since then earthquakes, comets, volcanoes, floods and other natural phenomena have been suggested by medical men as causes. Even after 24 centuries science knows little about this malady and the almost unbelievable speed with which it spreads.—Capper's Weekly.

Christens Crack Train

Pretty seventeen-year-old Wilma Stein, of Seattle, Wash., was chosen to represent and christen the "New Olympian." new crack train operating between Seattle andn Chicago in 61 1-2 hours. The beauty and grace of Miss Stein are symbolic of the handsome lines of the new express, which she sent on its way with a parting message.

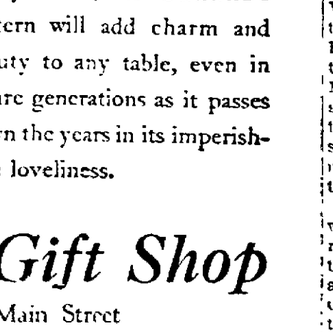
Ancients Excelled in Art of Glass Staining

The medieval artists in stained glass toiled like jewelers setting diamonds and rubies. Their ideal was not a pretty picture made transparent, but a window made beautiful. Years of experimenting with various combinations of glass taught them secrets of design which resulted in windows that have never been surpassed.

Glass staining and glass painting are two quite different things. One method is to build up a mosaic of pieces of glass, colored not only on its surface but its very substance The other is to paint the design upon white or colored glass.

It was in glass making that the ancients excelled The blue of one school was so vibrant that the workers ground down sapphires to obtain their magic color. The fancy although popular, is probably fallacious. Nevertheless, the colors of the ancients were so expertly compounded that they blended into a uniform whole in a completed window and never appeared flat or "raw."

The greens, for example, were not a straight mixture of blue and yellow, but a combination of blue and red and yellow in such proportion that they did not fuse into adjoining blues at a distance as do modern blue-and-yellow greens. The reds likewise were distinctive, as they contained alternating layers of red, and green-white gave a mellow softness to light before it reached the eye of the beholder.



First Stowaway

Arthur Schreiber of Portland, Me., secreted himself in the tail of the "Yellow Bird" and flew to Paris with the French flyers. Considerable comment has been expressed that the flyers would have made their goal if it had not been for the additional weight of the boy.

Regrets Killing by Drys But Necessary Sometimes

Agents Deal with Desperate Men, Taking of Life Justified Then

"WE HAVE a slogan in the W. C. T. U.," says Mrs. Ella Boole, commenting on the present situation. "It goes this way: 'Give prohibition a chance; the saloons had theirs.'" As head of the Women's Christian Temperance Union, she expressed regret over the shedding of blood in efforts to enforce the law.

In spite of the recent tragedies—the death of Henry Virkula at International Falls, Minn; the Aurora, Ill, shooting in the De King family, the death of J. W. Hendricks, student of Abington, Ky., and the "I'm Alone" case—Mrs. Ella Boole firmly believes in the ultimate success of the act.

Mrs. Boole continued saying that sometimes officers were forced to extreme measures by the very nature of their work when they are dealing with desperate characters. It becomes a question of the officer's life or the bootleggers.

"If life is taken in defense against robbery; or if a life is taken to prevent murder; or if personal harm is done in the pursuit of a criminal, it is called justifiable homicide. The same rule of law and reason applies in these regrettable cases."

MRS. ELLA BOOLE
(International Newsreel)

"WE HAVE a slogan in the W. C. T. U.," says Mrs. Ella Boole, commenting on the present situation. "It goes this way: 'Give prohibition a chance; the saloons had theirs.'" As head of the Women's Christian Temperance Union, she expressed regret over the shedding of blood in efforts to enforce the law.

In spite of the recent tragedies—the death of Henry Virkula at International Falls, Minn.; the Aurora, Ill., shooting in the De King family, the death of J. W. Hendricks, student of Abington, Ky., and the "I'm Alone" case—Mrs. Ella Boole firmly believes in the ultimate success of the act.

Mrs. Boole continued saying that sometimes officers were forced to extreme measures by the very nature of their work when they are dealing with desperate characters. It becomes a question of the officer's life or the bootleggers.

"If life is taken in defense against robbery; or if a life is taken to prevent murder; or if personal harm is done in the pursuit of a criminal, it is called justifiable homicide. The same rule of law and reason applies in these regrettable cases."

Ancients Excelled in Art of Glass Staining

The medieval artists in stained glass toiled like jewelers setting diamonds and rubies. Their ideal was not a pretty picture made transparent, but a window made beautiful. Years of experimenting with various combinations of glass taught them secrets of design which resulted in windows that have never been surpassed.

Glass staining and glass painting are two quite different things. One method is to build up a mosaic of pieces of glass, colored not only on its surface but its very substance. The other is to paint the design upon white or colored glass.

It was in glass making that the ancients excelled. The blue of one school was so vibrant that the workers ground down sapphires to obtain their magic color. The fancy although popular, is probably fallacious. Nevertheless, the colors of the ancients were so expertly compounded that they blended into a uniform whole in a completed window and never appeared flat or "raw."

The greens, for example, were not a straight mixture of blue and yellow, but a combination of blue and red and yellow in such proportions that they did not fuse into adjoining blues at a distance as do modern blue-and-yellow greens. The reds likewise were distinctive, as they contained alternating layers of red, and green-white gave a mellow softness to light before it reached the eye of the beholder.

TWO WEEKS OFF WITH PAY

Another week can't go by without a short treatise on the subject of vacations. This, we must admit, has been handled pretty well by the Steamship Lines, Railroad Systems and Tourist Bureaus—exceptionally well, we might say, and do. So well in fact, that if one took all the trips recommended, he or she would finally take a trip not adiectivized (ah, how we've been waiting for a chance to use that one!) in the advertisements. A short and speedy trip, if you get what we mean, and in that sheltered retreat just over the hill, commonly referred to as the Poor House.

Which isn't at all what we started to say. What we want to get across in a big way is: This is the age when everybody can take a vacation all year round. A vacation right in the home. For proof, we suggest an Estate Gas Range for a vacation from cooking and cooking troubles; a Bee-Vac Vacuum Cleaner for a vacation from cleaning drudgery; a Boss Electric Washer for a vacation from the dread of seeing Monday morning roll around; and goodness knows how many other things there are on display at our store that will lighten the work in the home. You should see them.

Also, see us for rates. They were never lower than they are right now. We'd be glad to talk things over with you, and sell you a one-way ticket to the Land of Comfort and Convenience, on terms so generous they seem like two weeks off with pay.

And of course, Estate Heatrola. Not needed now perhaps, but it's a trip to the tropics in itself. Not to mention a vacation from the ordinary fuel bill, for Heatrola, you know, cuts fuel expense almost in half. So just be patient for the next few weeks. The Annual Free Coal Campaign starts August 10, with a supply of Free Coal for every Heatrola purchaser.

A teacher had been telling her class of small pupils a few facts about ancient history. She concluded with: "And children, don't forget that all this happened 2000 years ago."

For a moment all were silent, but finally a small boy spoke. "Gee, teacher, but you've got a swell memory."

Prof. Ed. Daley, man about town, announces that a woman is as strong as her weakest wink.

Last winter, over WLW, the Heatrola man kept telling folks about the "June warmth from the Heatrola" and how the owners of this famous heater enjoyed it in the cold winter time. We're having plenty of "June warmth" right now. The problem is not how to keep warm, but to keep cool. The porch is a good place to spend your time, and one of our canvas couch hammocks just the thing to spend it in. We'd suggest that you drop in and try them. They'll cure that tired feeling in you. Prices? They're as reasonable as the quality will permit.

Good furniture is purchased for years of lasting service. Substantial quality and real beauty of design and finish, richen and become more appealing with each passing year. Modern craftsmanship is bringing to us today rare combinations of beautiful and cabinet woods, artistic design at prices never possible under the slow and tedious process of old master designers. Keep those things in mind when you start thinking about refurnishing your home, and remember that this store makes a point of showing the finest there is in furniture at economical prices.

Don't forget our recent suggestions about June wedding gifts. The gift problem will be solved correctly if you make your selection from the wide variety of household furnishings on display at our store. Just come in and look around.
